Your Missionaries to "the Nations"

I met "Long Braid" this past Monday. I watched Mon-Weds as she came to Bible lesson to see if she would make a decision for Jesus. She didn't. "Orange Braid" made her decision on Wednesday, along with all of the others. So Thursday, "Orange Braid" indicated that she thought she needed to pray again because it was a new day. I carefully explained that it wasn't necessary, as once a daughter of God the Father, you don't need to request daily admission to the family. I then asked if there was anyone else who hadn't prayed yet, but who would like to do so. "Long Braid" indicated that she would like to pray. I instructed (as always) that I would lead in prayer, and if she wanted to say these same things to God, she could say them in her mind to God. "Long Braid", however, decided to pray them aloud as I led. (No problem.) But as she did, all the others, who had prayed the day before, prayed aloud with her (which, I'm sure encouraged her). But I couldn't help to silently chuckle at "Orange Braid," who was seated beside me. She prayed, "Thank you for cleaning away my sins, again. Thank you, for becoming my Father in heaven, again. Thank you, for making me your child, again." (Mark)
